

uk music video awards 19

the uk music video awards accepts entries from all around the globe for its annual awards competition. this year more than 1800 films were submitted for judging across a range of musical genres and crafts, and once again demonstrated the strength of creativity, experimentation and artistry alive in music filmmaking.

the shortlisted work and people shown in this booklet have been judged to be the best in their categories – no small feat, given the strength of this year’s submissions. congratulations to everyone involved.

judging for the awards started in august when 350 jury members were invited to vote in round 1. in round 2, the top-voted entries were reviewed by over 100 industry professionals in a series of live judging panels. jury members were also invited to vote for the individual awards for director, new director, producer, commissioner, artist and for the best production company award, based on a body of work from the past year.

as ever, we are grateful for the participation of our jury members. It is thanks to them that the uk music video awards is a respected and valued competition. special thanks go to our friends at the mill and at the bfi for hosting judging sessions, and to 2018’s outstanding achievement winner carrie sutton, cut+run’s toby abbott, wpa’s barnaby laws and the mill’s charlie morris who chaired panels, as well as our editorial director, david knight.

and so onwards to the awards night. the uk music video awards show will take place at london’s roundhouse on wednesday 23 october, when we will be presenting more than 30 awards for achievement in music video and music film. we look forward to bringing together british and international music filmmaking talent to celebrate the most creative, innovative and inspiring work, people and companies of the past 12 months.

we hope to see you there.
